

After Watching a Snake [1]

May 28, 2018 Featured Poetry [2]

Science and Society [3]

Nature [4]

Poem by Chris Gillen

After Watching a Snake

*And in this disconcerting creature
a tiny hunger*

—Jorie Graham

Myosin heavy chain in muscle
roped to bone,
breathless head bent in strain,
narrow tail
twisted as around the rod of Hermes,

neck buried in crystallography
like ribless
vertebrae deep under pitted

After Watching a Snake

Published on Talking Writing (<https://mail.talkingwriting.com>)

scales.

This hungry fibril reappears,
head above

grassy sinews and eyes locked on
actin flies,
pauses until the tropomyosin
lash slips aside,
baring tender fossa below.
Again

and again the thick filament grips
thin abdomens,
knits nanometer sutures of power,
stitches
burly fibers to cold-blooded
molecular desire.

Publishing Information

- Opening quote from “I Watched a Snake” by Jorie Graham in Erosion (Princeton University Press, 1983).

Art Information

- "Green Snake Coiling a Branch [5]" © Thomas Hafeneth; public domain.

Chris Gillen teaches animal physiology, introductory biology, and science writing at Kenyon College. His research group studies how larval and adult mosquitos regulate the volume and salt concentration of their internal fluids.

Gillen is author of The Hidden Mechanics of Exercise (Belknap Press, 2014) and Reading Primary Literature (Pearson, 2006). He was the recipient of the 2017 M. Patricia Morse Award for Excellence and Innovation in Science Education from the Society of Integrative and Comparative Biology.

Source URL: <https://mail.talkingwriting.com/after-watching-snake>

Links:

[1] <https://mail.talkingwriting.com/after-watching-snake>

After Watching a Snake

Published on Talking Writing (<https://mail.talkingwriting.com>)

[2] <https://mail.talkingwriting.com/talkingwriting-categories/featured-poetry>

[3] <https://mail.talkingwriting.com/tw-channels-and-categories/science-and-society>

[4] <https://mail.talkingwriting.com/tw-channels-and-categories/nature>

[5] <https://unsplash.com/photos/0-EDXTbqy9E>